From general contractors, specialty trade and homebuilders to material suppliers, real estate developers and investors, the careful financial management of construction companies and their projects is paramount. With the inherent risks of the industry further magnified by significant economic challenges and dramatic market changes, you need a trusted advisor to help guide your business through.

Boyer & Ritter's Construction and Real Estate Services Group delivers credibility, precision and commitment as we help clients keep a watchful eye on profitability, manage risks, address tax considerations and respond to state and local regulations. Our clients rely upon the in-depth industry knowledge and expertise of the B&R team, backed by more than 80 years of experience in the construction industry.

From small subcontractors to large management firms, B&R has helped countless companies in the construction industry to build their businesses as well as their projects. Among the firm's diverse clientele are general contractors, construction managers, subcontractors, design professionals, specialty trades, homebuilders, developers, governmental agencies, not-for-profit organizations, privately held companies, construction consultants, architects and engineers. Our professionals are active in the Construction Financial Management Association (CFMA), the American Subcontractors Association (ASA), Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC) and the McGladrey Construction and Real Estate Network (MCREN).

In addition to traditional accounting, auditing and tax services, we offer industry-specific business advisory services designed to increase your profitability, improve your competitive position and reduce your operating costs. Each of these services is delivered using the B&R Advantage, our firm's unique philosophy of client service, which seeks to help the owners and shareholders of a firm achieve sustainable goals for their company while also addressing their individual financial goals. Healthy leadership leads to healthy companies, and B&R is committed to the success of both.
