In the not-for-profit community, accountability takes many forms—and often begins with the ability to generate revenue and effectively manage resources. For mission-driven organizations, it is imperative to have the support of an accounting firm that understands the challenges and opportunities of your organization, and who knows the details—from board priorities to foundation strategies—of your world.

Boyer & Ritter brings an accomplished team to your organization, and one with the knowledge and passion to help you make an impact. As consultants, auditors and tax professionals for countless not-for-profit organizations and foundations, we can assist you with the financial planning and assurance aspects of your organization’s operation.

For not-for-profit organizations, the B&R Advantage, our firm’s unique approach to each client engagement, represents our commitment to helping you find new opportunities to protect and enhance your organization’s assets, while at the same time minimizing risk and avoiding options that could distract from your core mission. In today’s environment, finding that balance is critical to long-term sustainability.

Our clients benefit from our years of experience assisting not-for-profit executives with everything from consultation on financial strategies to developing internal controls and preparing for financial statement audits. The experts at B&R have served a wide variety of tax-exempt organizations such as trusts and foundations, arts organizations, human and social services, economic development agencies, membership associations, health and wellness groups, faith-based organizations, and educational institutions.
